++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Unsettled: rain at times, brighter and showery in between. Windy.

This Evening and Tonight:
Gales and heavy showers across northern Scotland easing. Areas of rain spreading northwards, heavy over hills and in the west, especially later, with possible sleet or snow over parts of Northern Ireland. Some southern and eastern areas drying up.

Thursday:
A band of rain, heavy in places, sweeps eastwards across most parts, followed by brighter conditions with scattered showers. Rain and hill snow across northwestern areas. Windy; a little colder.

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Unsettled and windy, especially in the west where some places are likely to see large amounts of rain. Drier for eastern areas, and turning mild for all, locally very mild.
